INTRODUCTION

The Library of Congress Information Bulletin (LCIB) is the chief medium of communication between the Library of Congress and its staff as well as between the Library of Congress and other libraries worldwide. Appearing weekly, it generally includes descriptions of past and future events at LC, announcements of LC projects and programs, bibliographies, photographs, summaries of national and international conferences, and staff news both professional and personal.

Because of the Library of Congress's role as the de facto U.S. national library and supplier of services to other libraries, much of what LC does eventually affects other institutions. It is for this reason that the LCIB has such a wide circulation and is read regularly by other library professionals. Increasingly, the LCIB has begun to publish information of more than transient interest. Short bibliographies on important topics, descriptions of the LC Optical Disk Pilot Program, explanations of the research in mass-deacidification and other paper preservation techniques conducted at LC, and announcements of new bibliographic products and services all may be useful for library professionals to refer back to a year, two years, or ten years from the time they are published.

In view of the increasingly long-term value of the LCIB, the Library of Congress Professional Association (LCPA), a 1700-member staff association of LC employees, has undertaken the project of producing an annual index. Formerly, the Library of Congress itself attempted to prepare an official index annually, but in recent years there have been insufficient staff and financial resources for this. This year's publication was produced entirely with LCPA funds and volunteer help.

If this year's index is successful, LCPA expects to continue the index on an annual basis, possibly cumulating it from year to year to increase its effectiveness as a reference tool.

About the Index

This index was prepared using terms from a special thesaurus created specifically for this project. The thesaurus is based chiefly on Library of Congress Subject Headings, with certain extensions and modifications called for by the nature of the publication being indexed. Some LCSH subdivisions have been used, but they have been kept to a minimum; more often, what might otherwise have been a subdivision has been given as explanatory text preceding the page reference. An attempt has been made to model name headings on the established form according to the Anglo-American Cataloguing Rules and the LC authority file wherever feasible.

It may also be helpful for users of this index to be aware of the following guidelines that were adhered to in its preparation:

- Visitors to LC are not indexed individually by name, unless their visit is the subject of an entire article; instead, a collective heading, "Visitors (to LC)," cites all the pages on which lists of LC visitors occur.
- LC staff winning service and achievement awards are not indexed by name; instead, a collective heading, "Awards, citations, and prizes (LC)," lists all the pages on which such listings occur.
- LC staff appointments, promotions, resignations, etc. are listed separately in a special appendix.
- LC organizational units (offices, divisions, etc.) are all entered directly under their lowest level name, rather than as a subdivision of the Library of Congress, e.g. "Geography and Map Division (LC)" rather than "Library of Congress. Geography and Map Division."
- The index is alphabetized generally according to the current Library of Congress Filing Rules (Washington: Library of Congress, 1980). Among other things this means that numerals file before letters and abbreviations file letter by letter according to their actual spelling.
- Photographs accompanying articles are generally not indexed. Photographs not associated with an article are indexed only if they are deemed particularly important.
- Persons, publications, and events mentioned only peripherally are generally not indexed.
- A number of collective headings have been used to bring together certain kinds of events, publications, etc. These include the following:

AUTOMATION (AT LC)
 AWARDS, CITATIONS, AND PRIZES (LC)
 BIBLIOGRAPHIES
 CONCERTS (LC)
 EXHIBITS AND DISPLAYS (AT LC)
 PLAYS (AT LC)
 READINGS AND LECTURES (LC)

In some cases, the events, etc. collected under these headings are also separately indexed; in others this constitutes the only access to this information.

- Note also that, because the "blue pages" of the LCIB are not numbered, these are referred to in the index by the page number immediately preceding the blue section with the addition of a lower case letter a,b,c,d (etc.), referring to the first, second, third, fourth (etc.) blue page.

Any suggestions or comments concerning the approach taken in this index will be gratefully received by next year's editorial staff. Please address any correspondence to: LCIB Index Project, LCPA, The Library of Congress Professional Association, Washington, DC 20540.

Please keep in mind that this is not an official publication of the Library of Congress. Those issuing the Library of Congress Information Bulletin itself are not involved in the preparation of this index.
